ANNUAL SSSML LECTURE

Laurence R. Iannaccone will deliver the up-coming Annual SSSML Lecture on Thursday, February 20, 1992 at Brigham Young University. Iannaccone, who is an Associate Professor of Economics at Santa Clara University and a frequent contributor to journals and meetings focusing on the social scientific study of religion, will address the topic, "Risk, Rationality and Religious Port-folios with an Application to Mormons." The lecture is scheduled for 11:00 a.m. in Room 1170 of the Talmage Building (TMCB).

The lecture is being co-sponsored by the following departments and centers at Brigham Young University: Department of Economics; Department of Sociology; Center for the Study of the Family; and the Charles Redd Center for Western Studies.

CALL FOR PAPERS

SSSML will hold its 1992 Annual Meeting November 6-8, 1992 in Washington D.C. in conjunction with the Annual Meeting of the Society for the Scientific Study of Religion. The theme of the SSSR Meeting is "Religion and Power". The SSSML sessions will consist of two paper sessions, a business meeting and the newly established Glenn M. Vernon Memorial Lecture. One of the SSSML paper sessions is entitled "Mormonism and Power"—following the general theme of the SSSR Meeting. The other SSSML paper session is currently listed as the "Sociology of Mormonism" but will be reformulated after papers are organized into some coherent theme.

Ken White is serving as SSSML Program Chair. Send abstracts for papers to Ken by March 15, 1992. After the March 15 deadline, Ken will get in touch with Nancy Nason-Clark, who is program chair for the SSSR Meeting. They will collectively assess what papers on Mormonism may have been submitted, and then work out the sessions. If there is a paper dealing with a problem that is central to another session and the Mormon case would be particularly instructive for others, then they may shift the paper to such a session.

Deadlines. Submission of Abstracts: March 15, 1992. Final Submission of Papers (3 copies): September 1, 1992:

SSSML Program Chair

NOMINATIONS FOR

Glenn M Vernon Memorial Lecture

Membership voted to sponsor a Glenn M. Vernon Memorial Lecture next November during the 1992 SSSML Meeting in Washington D.C. The lecture, which will be listed as a scheduled session in the program of the 1992 Annual Meeting of the Society for the Scientific Study of Religion, will provide the presenter with an extended period of time to discuss a topic dealing with Mormon life. A stipend of approximately $500 will be provided. Nominations for the lecture should be sent to:

Tim B. Heaton
Department of Sociology
Brigham Young University
Provo, UT 84602
(Phone: 801-378-3280)

MINUTES OF THE 1991 SSSML BUSINESS MEETING

[Editor's Note: SSSML sponsored two paper sessions and a business meeting during the 1991 Annual Meeting of the Society for the Scientific Study of Religion, held November 8-10, 1991 at the Vista International Hotel in Pittsburgh, PA. Approximately 30 individuals participated in some portion of the SSSML sponsored sessions. For a complete listing of the seven formal papers presented in the SSSML sessions, see the October 1991 issue of the SSSML Newsletter (Vol. 13, No. 4). The Minutes from the business meeting follows.]

Recorded by Tim B. Heaton,
President of SSSML

The business meeting was held 9 November 1991 at Pittsburgh, PA in conjunction with the annual SSSML convention.

The following were nominated for the upcoming election: Vice President/President Elect, Perry Cunningham; Lynn Payne, Secretary/Treasurer; Board Members, Merlin Brinkerhoff, Marie Cornwall, John Jarvis.

It was agreed that our annual lecture would be held in conjunction with the SSSR meetings next year. We want to make the topic general enough to attract a large group. We may also wish to name the lecture after someone such as Glenn Vernon.

We discussed a possible response to the First Presidency statement on "Symposia." Although a letter of protest may not be very productive, there was some sentiment that some type of response might be appropriate. It is also possible that the statement was directed to other organizations in addition to Sunstone. Tim Heaton will contact MHA, AMCAP, and Dialogue to see if they have considered making any type of response.

BYU is planning to invite Larry Iannaccone to give a lecture.

Ken White agreed to organize our sessions for the SSSR meetings next year.

Jim Davidson asked how we felt about the joint SSSR arrangement with We expressed satisfaction. He said that we would continue for another year and then the SSSR Board would take a formal vote on making the arrangement permanent.

Marie Cornwall gave a progress report on the Sociology of Mormonism book.

COMING UP IN THE NEXT NEWSLETTER

Among items to be included in the next newsletter are the following: Research notes; coverage of the 1992 Annual SSSML Lecture by Larry Iannaccone, further information on the 1992 Annual Meeting of SSSML, and a list of recent publications that should be of interest to SSSML members. In addition, SSSML members are urged to consider submitting short articles, interesting data or news items. Materials should be sent to:

Lawrence A. Young
Department of Sociology
Brigham Young University
Provo, UT 84602

RESEARCH NOTES

[Editor's Note: Bron Ingoldsby is currently a member of the SSSML Board and the Family Development Department at Ricks College. The following research note is reprinted from New Perspectives (April, 1987):13.]

Who Do LDS Youth Look Up To?

by Bron Ingoldsby

In 1982 I published a study (Balswick, J. and Ingoldsby, B., "Heros and Heroines Among American Adolescents," Sex Roles 8:243-249 (1982) on the heros and heroines of American adolescents. Over 1000 high school students listed the six people that they looked up to the most and their responses were divided by sex and put into nine different categories (see Table on next page). It was found that young people of both sexes tend to idolize males over females 78% to 22% and to choose a public figure over a personal friend or relative by a ratio of seven to one. Actors, sports figures and popular musicians were mentioned the most, and scholars, government figures and religious leaders were mentioned the least.

This is an attempt to replicate that study with young people who are members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. If LDS values are having an impact on their youth then we would expect higher ratings for family members and church leaders and other "positive" models than is found in the general population.

The middle columns in the table show the results of 86 high school girls and 66 high school boys surveyed at seminary classes in an LDS community. For the girls, family members top the list, followed by female friends and male religious leaders. They chose more people they knew. (44%) and had more female models (52.5%) than did their nonLDS counterparts. Enough teachers were selected that an additional category was created to cover them.

The striking thing about the teenaged LDS boys' results is that it is almost exactly the same as the national sample. Male sports stars, actors and musicians dominate the list and they look up to even fewer females than the nonLDS boys did (12% to 21%). The personal vs. public figure split was the same for both groups—31% to 69%.

A smaller sample of LDS college freshmen (35 females and 39 males) was surveyed to assess hero changes with age. The college aged females listed family members, friends, and religious leaders most frequently; split evenly between public and personal choices, and listed females 48% of the time. The college males also had positive models at the top of their lists, but only mentioned females 15% of the time and made more public figure choices (60% of the time).

It appears that with the exception of high school aged boys, young Latter-day Saints reflect the values of their religion in this area. Parents seem to be universally looked up to and friends and teachers seem to be very influential. Local church leaders were often mentioned, but when it came to the General Authorities it was usually the Church President who was listed. The high school youth tended to include President Kimball while the college sample put down President Benson, who had become the prophet shortly before the college group was surveyed. This indicates that the church president was selected simply because of his office and not because of individual traits that the young people want to emulate.

Many of the public figures mentioned were LDS members, such as BYU football players. Two other results are worth noting: government leaders were actually mentioned less often by this sample than in the national one, in spite of the patriotic nature that Mormons are known for; and there is still a relative dearth of female role models in the church hierarchy for its youth to look up to.

In summary, it appears that with the exception of the younger boys who seem unaffected by church values in this area, young Mormons have more positive and personal role models than does the general population.
